4-H Club Rally to Be Held June 8 at Experiment Farm

23 Southwest Arkansas Counties Are Expected to Be Represented

PROGRAM IS READY

Future Farmers, Homemakers to Study Various Experiments

Approximately 1500 4-H club members from 23 Southwest Arkansas counties are expected to attend the study days at the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture fruit and truck branch experiment station near Hope during the week of June 8, according to G. W. Ware, assistant director in charge of the station.

The Hempstead county relegation, including 200 club members will visit the station June 9, under the direction of Miss Melva Bullington, home demonstration agent, and W. E. Mounteastle, county agent.

This is the second year that special study days have been held at Arkansas experiment stations to give the future farmers and homemakers an opportunity to see how experiments with many phases of fruit, truck and field crops, livestock, engineering, and farm and home management are conducted, interpreted and utilized by the farmer.

The group program at the fruit and truck branch station will be conducted by L. C. Baber, district agent; W. J. Jernigan, state club leader; Miss Ella Posey, district home agent, and Miss June Donahue, specialist in community activities, all of the extension service.

A major feature will include a trip over the station farm to inspect and study farm buildings, pasture management, soil erosion, farm woodlots, soil building, field crop varieties, and orchard management, under the direction of Mrs. Ida A. Fenton, home economist; M. W. Muldrow, livestock specialist; L. C. Carter, assistant club leader; Claude Woolsey, horticulturist; Walter Mounteastle and Miss Melva Bullington, all of the extension service; and Jack Lincoln and W. R. Stark of the fruit and truck branch experiment station.

In addition, the young visitors will be instructed in record-keeping, laboratory work, weather recording, farm buildings, landscaping, poultry, home arrangement, and many other useful and special features.

Night programs will include singing, games, playlets, and a talk on "Developing Personality," by O. A. Graves, Hope attorney.

County agent W. E. Mounteastle and home demonstration agent, Miss Bullington consider such trips a valuable part of clubwork.

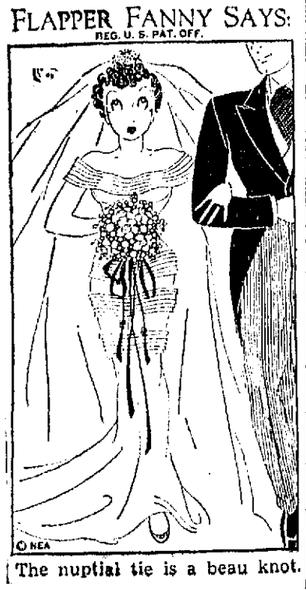

Protests Against Committee's Stand

Mrs. Fitzhugh to Ask Roll Call in Griffin Smith's Case

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)— Mrs. Laura Davis Fitzhugh of Augusta, vice chairman of the Democratic state committee, said in a satement Tuesday that the committee "should not disenfranchise more than 250,000 Arkansas voters by holding Griffin Smith ineligible to run for chief justice of the supreme court.

Mrs. Fitzhugh declared she would ask that a roll call vote be taken on the issue if it comes before a special meeting of the committee called for Saturday by Chairman James D. Head of Texarkana.

He also announced the replacement of evicted tenants.

WPA Worker Hurt in 45-Foot Plunge

D. C. Robertson Falls From High Bridge Near Jonesboro

JONESBORO—A 45-foot fall from the tower of a suspension bridge across Spring river at Black Rock, a WPA project, may prove fatal to D. C. Robertson, 27, of Black Rock. His condition was described as critical.

Robertson, sub-foreman on the project, had climbed the tower at the end of the bridge to assist workmen in removing wooden forms from the concrete walls.

A piece of the forms onto which he was holding came loose and he fell.

The accident was the first that has occurred on the bridge job, although it is rated the most hazardous project in the district.

Charles Zied Dies in Electric Chair

"Tri-State Gangster" Once Was Reprieved With Hauptmann

TRENTON, N. J.—(AP)—Charles Zied, 37, Philadelphia gangster and last member of the "Tri-State Gang," died in the electric chair at the state prison for the slaying of William T. Feitz, Jr., a Camden detective.

Once before Zied had been saved from the chair by the last-minute reprieve of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman.

That was on March 31, when Zied and Bruno Richard Hauptmann were to have died the same night. A grand jury investigation of the Paul H. Wendel case delayed Hauptmann's execution three days.

Arkansas to Get Big Federal Sum in Road Measure

State to Get $2,142,723 to Be Used in Highway Construction

TO AID FARM ROADS

Agreement Is Reached on Relief-Deficiency Measure

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Representative Cartwright said Wednesday that Arkansas under the Hayden-Cartwright road bill would receive $2,142,723 for regular federal aid to be used on highways; $430,000 for farm to market roads, and $890,000 for grade crossings.

Bill to White House

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The $461,000,000 Hayden-Cartwright road bill went to the White House when the House adopted a conference report on the measure authorizing the 1938-39 program.

The amendment under which Arkansas will be able to obtain federal highway money without matching it for the next two years was adopted as a result of efforts of Senator Joe T. Robinson after the bill was passed in the House without such a provision. Senator Robinson appeared before a committee to urge approval of the amendment.

13 Are Denounced As Ritual Slayers

Trial on Murder Charges Sought for Black Legion Gang

DETROIT.—(AP)—Dayton Dean, confessed "executioner" of the Black Legion organization said in court here Wednesday that members of the Legion would commit murder or any other crime that superior officers ordered.

He is on trial with 12 others in the slaying of Charles A. Poole.

Dean said that the execution of Poole was descreed by "Colonel" Harvey Davis and Ervin D. Lee, both among the defendants.

Killers Denounced

DETROIT —(AP)—State and federal officials attending a hearing here orged that 13 members of the Black Legion be held for trial on charges of having murdered Charles A. Poole.

It is alleged that Poole was executed because he knew too much about the Black Legion.

Prosecuting Attorney Duncan McRae said that all 13 had connected with the execution or with the meeting at which it was planned.

Alleged Confessions Described

Detective Sergeant John Harvill testified that he had talked in jail with Dayton Dean and other defendants. He said that Dean had admitted that he killed Poole.

He testified that Poole told him that with a revolver in each hand, he shot Poole as the victim knelt beging for his life. Sergeant Harvill quoted Dean as saying that he shot Poole "because I believed that was what was expected of me."

When the execution party returned to Detroit, Sergeant Harvill quoted Dean as saying that Harvey Davis, a colonel in the Black Legion, warned all the members of the party to secrecy, threatening them with death if they revealed what had happened.

Sergeant Harvill said that Erwin Lee, one of the defendants, said that he was a member of the execution party but fired two or three shots to one side "because I had lost my nerve."

The officer said that Lee told him: "I had agreed to do this thing and when you agree to do something in the Black Legion, you have to do it."

Gamblers Come to Aid of Luciano

Tell of His Activities at Racing Resorts and Poker Business

NEW YORK —(AP)— Racing bookmakers and dice game gamblers came to the aid of Charles (Lucky) Luciano Tuesday in his fight to disprove the state's charge that he is boss of New York's vice racket.

Luciano was described as a big money gambler with an interest in dice concessions at track resorts and as a bettor of 0300 to 0500 on single races.

First of nine defendants to start his defense—four pleaded guilty—Luciano introduced Fred Bachmann, who said he had made many gambling partnerships with Luciano during 25 years in the "crap shooting and poker business."

Luciano put up $5,000 as his stake in a crap game enterprise, Buchmann said, getting 25 per cent of the profits.

Luciano's other witnesses were: Max Kalik and Henry Goldstone, bookmakers; Thomas Francis, "horse breeder and handicapper," and Joseph Forgione, "betting commissioner," of Newark, N. J.

Kalik, who said he had been a bookmaker at Eastern tracks for 30 years, testified Luciano bet with him nearly every day during the New York racing season over eight years. The bets on a single race averaged between $300 and $500, he said.

Gildstone, who was associated with Kalik in bookmaking, said he knew Luciano as the operatir of the Saratoga Club, a gambling house at Saratoga.

Paris Threatened by Food Shortage as Strike Spreads

350,000 Workers, Led by Radicals, Go on Strike Movement

SUPPLIES CUT OFF

Resignation of Premier Sarraut and His Cabinet Expected

PARIS, France.—(AP)—A strike movement embracing 350,000 workers and 300 factories rolled over France Wednesday as socialists and radical-socialists prepared to take over the government.

The capital itself was threatened with a shortage of food.

Milk, water, meat and ice supplies were cut off. Pumping station workers threatened to quit.

Bakers were considering joining the strikers.

Socialist were arranging plans to name Leon Blum as the new premier of France.

Factories Are Idle

PARIS.—(AP)—The strike movement took a new spurt when 20,000 more workers folded their arms Friday in a passive occupation of factories.

This new wave of strikes complicated the situation for Leon Blum, Socialist attempting to form a People's Front govrenment.

A tendency toward accepting currency devaluation as inevitable apparently has appeared in French quarters hostile to such a measure. Blum is opposed to devaluation but financiers said he may be forced to it.

Authorities estimated 25,000 employes have quit work.

Strikers, most of them in the metal-working industries, said they feared if they left the plants, negotiations between their representatives and the employers would be affected adversely to them.

The Employers Association reported 66 factories idle. It blamed "outside tators" for the movement.

Forest Guard Is Found Murdered

Eben Bethel Is Slain Near Pilot Mountain—Bloodhounds Are Called

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(AP)—The killing of Eben Bethel, 45, forest guard, was reporttd Tuesday night by A. L. Nelson, superintendent of Ouachita National Forest. The crime occurred near Pilot mountain, 10 miles northeast of Waldron.

Nelson said Bethel's body was found late Tuesday. He had been shot to death. The guard had been investigating what Nelson described as an incendiary fire on lands near Waldron.

Bethel had been employed by the forest as a guard for 15 years in the Cold Springs district of the Ouachita National Forest, with headquarters at Waldron.

A request for bloodhounds was received by the sheriff's department here Tuesday night.

Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Modern propriety foodes are results of attempts to take advantage of new facts, discovered in relation to essentials of the human diet.

The proprietary foods of a previous era frequently lacked vitamins and minerals salts. They also were overrich in carbohydrates. As a result, the producers were able to show pictures of very fat babies, which, however, may not have been healthy babies.

When properly diluted with water or when made up with milk, some of the prepared foods now available approximate the composition of breast milk. In some, the fat is a mixture of vegetable and animal fats, in an attempt to imitate the physical and chemical qualities of the fat found in breast milk.

These proprietary foods, in most instances, are somewhat more expensive than the milk mixtures which may be made up at home, their chief advantage being their ease of preparation.

Specialists in infant feeding do not quite agree whether the synthetic mixtures of fat are more easily absorbed, or more easily digested, by the baby than the fat of cow's milk.

Other baby foods consist largely of dried milk in addition to sugars. Some contain milk, cane sugar, starch, dextrin, maltose, vitamins A and B, and a variety of mineral salts.

Malted milk also is used in infant feeding. This consists of one-third dried skimmed milk and two-thirds extra sugars, such as dextrin and maltose. There also are malted foods which are chiefly mixtures of dextrin and maltose. Physicians frequently recommend these as supplementary foods, because of their value in furnishing calories and in aiding the baby to gain weight.

Other special preparations, such as lastic acid milk, milk powder, protein milks, and various cereal and gruel feedings, should be used only when prescribed by the doctor.

Sometimes you may hear that your neighbor's child is doing remarkably well with a special type of proprietary or patent food. That should not be taken as evidence that your baby will do equally well.

Every baby is a special problem. It is not wise to experiment with strange foods without knowing that they are especially fitted for your baby.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Perhaps the word "allergy" means no more to you today than it did to me a month or two ago.

I knew in general that it had something to do with untouchables, those foods one cannot eat or the weeds one dare not smell; also that house-dust and fur sometimes offend certain intolerant insuses and throats.

It took a serious upset and a consequent allergy clinic to relieve me of my ignorance. Now I have some small idea of what it is all about. And in my turn, I believe, I proved to be a useful guinea-pig for at my age and everything I should not be allergic to a very common food, which I am, as my tests proved.

I have hesitated to write this article because you know how it is. Instantly people will clap hands to heads and groan, "That's what's wrong with me," or "My Johnny is allergic to doughnuts, I just know he is."

Rely on Allergy Test

Any new discovery in therapeutic science is almost afraid to announce itself, as we all have such a beautiful tendency to jump to conclusions. But in "allergy" we really have no fly-by-night fad that will pas sont with the election; so it seems sensible to discuss it as a matter of interest.

Child or adult may now be tested by tiny and quite innocent injections under the skin, of food preparations, or pollen, or what have you, to see if the system resents one or more special items. In other words, one man's meat or pleasure may be another's poison.

Eggs, wheat, vegetables, poultry, meats, milk, most fruits and so on may agree with you. But, hey there! —what's that? No strawberries? And just now when they are so good too. Oh, no? Well, that's a relief. Onions? That's better. And so it goes.

Children may be allergic to certain foods and have to do without them; then in time outgrow the intolerance and go right at them again and eat all they want. In some instances, all other things being favorable, when a necessary food has been found to be an enemy there is a process of "desensitization" which often is satisfactory, but once in a while not as successful as mama hoped.

Idiosyncracy Affects Health

But one thing is sure, and that is that many children and many people who never have been quite well and who have baffled the doctors because there seemed to be no real reason for continued illness, have been found to be "allergic" to something they ate or breathed. And when the item was identified and relegated to limbo, recovery has frequently been rather amazing.

Allergy will not cure bad tonsils, adenoids, or a pain in the knee. But it will tell most of us, in time, what food to let alone.

What is it that I myself cannot eat? I know you are curious. It is one of the "staffs" of life, but I shall not name it. If I did you would be testing it out on the family and that would be terrible. I am I, and you are you, and Johnny is Johnny. No—it isn't bread. Yes, I feel much, much better, thank you.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

There is a great deal of exciting, old-fashioned blood and thunder melodrama in Meade Minnegerode's new book, "Marie Antoinette's Henchman" (Farrar and Rinehart: $3.50). If you like bloodshed, hair-raising escapes, and infinitely involved plots and counter-plots, you'll find this book right down your alley.

It tells about a darling French nobleman—Jean, Baron de Batz—who went to bat for the royalties during the French Revolution and spent several eventful years playing "I Spy" with the guillotine and its bloodthirsty agents.

De Batz fished in very dark waters. First of all, he was a speculator, and he found the turmoil and confusion of the revolution ideally adapted to his talents. Second, he hated the revolution and all its works, and at great risk of his neck he stayed in France to do what he could to discomfit the revolutionists.

He tried to rescue King Louis from jail, and failed. Then he tried to rescue Marie Antoinette and came within a hair's breadth of succeeding. After that he devoted himself to a devious career of bribery and plotting to cheat the guillotine of victims and to spread confusion among the terrorists.

In this work he succeeded admirably. His agents were everywhere; they penetrated to high revolutionary councils and sabotaged things so successfully that Mr. Minnigerode ascribes Robespierre's fall at least partly to the baron's schemes.

Some of this is quite confusing, but most of it is an exciting picture of a cruel and turbulent era.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD. — "Trucking" may mean a dance to the rest of the country, but to movietown it means a lot of painstaking work. On the set, trucking is a term for a shot in which the camera is moved to follow the action of a scene.

On the screen you see trucking scenes without marveling at the omniscience of the camera eye, which can hover over a ballroom and follow the gyrations of a single couple. Or can move, apparently, over intervening walls or even through keyholes. Or can swiftly traverse a rocky terrain without a bump or optical jiggle.

Well, the camera actually moves—though not through keyholes. It requires much preparation and many rehearsals.

Say that a couple of players are to be shown strolling along a garden path. The camera crew builds a good, substantial track parallel to the path, and two or three husky laborers push the camera mount along the rails.

Boom in Studios

Booms are more interesting to watch, and great fun to ride on. A boom is a contraption something like a steam shovel, except that where the shovel would be is a platform on which perch the camera, photographer, and director. The boom proper may be 50 feet long. It can move up and out, or traverse horizontally.

All overhead scenes are made from a boom. It is heavily counterweighted, and operated by manpower.

One of the most difficult jobs of vertical trucking was that scene in which Shirley Temple danced down the spiral staircase of Cap'n January's lighthouse. Difficult for her, too; she had to maintain an exact tempo on the turns, while men stood below holding life nets. Didn't miss a lick.

For long distance jobs of trucking, such as following horseback riders, they put the camera in a special automobile and the director howls his orders from the front seat.

Costly Stroll

In "White Fang" you'll see, but may not especially notice, an interesting trucking scene. Michael Whalen and Jean Muir walk about 200 feet along the side of a ravine. There was no place for the camera along the narrow path; so the trucking experts built a trestle along the floor of the ravine. It was 15 feet high and 215 feet long—quite a lot of trouble just to record a simple stroll.

Faked Action

Of course, not all scenes are genuine in which characters are shown going places. Automobiles sequences, in which the disappearing highway is seen through a rear window, are always faked. The players sit in a dummy car which is jolted now and then by a couple of laborers, and a previously photographed background is used.

Likewise, airplane and train scenes, and horseback shots of screen damsels who can't ride, are made to look realistic. More realistic, really, than if the scenes were done without special effects. Economy seldom is a factor in these things; trick processes look better.

Turban Wrapper

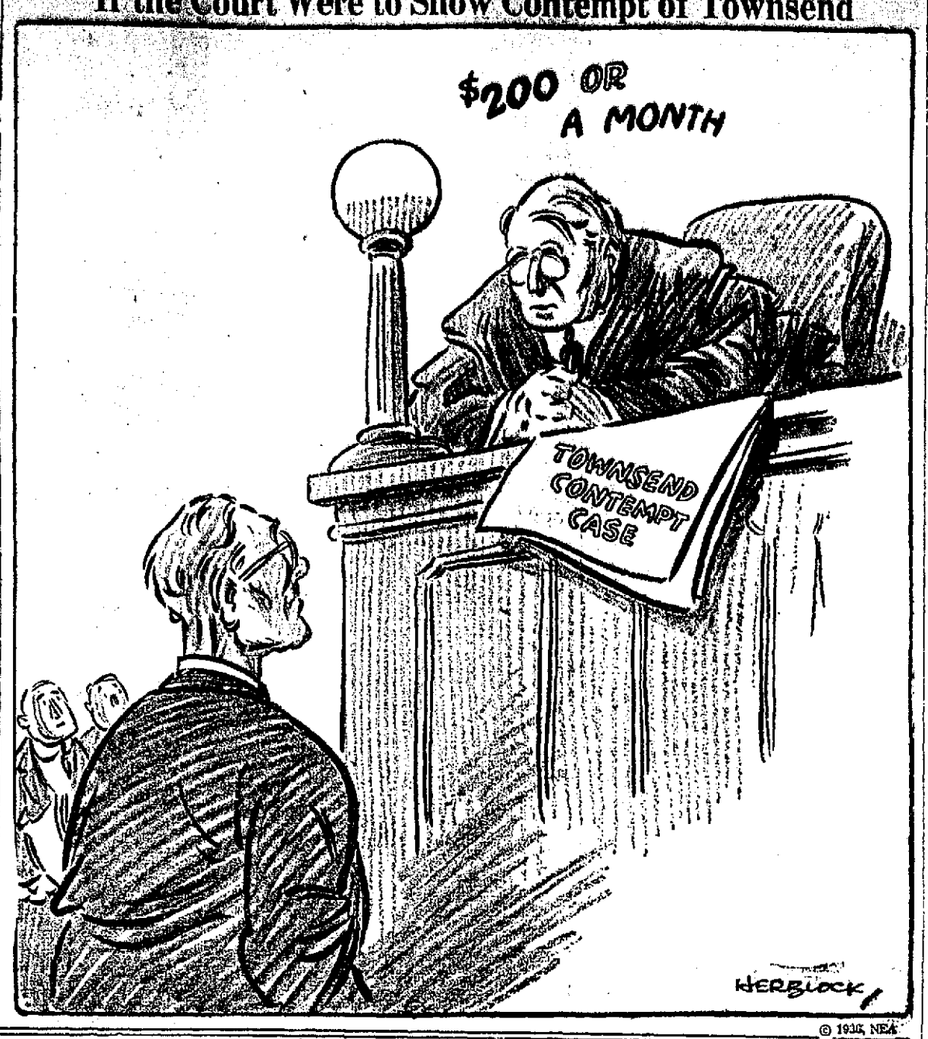

These days the "Charge of the Light Brigade" set is jammed with East Indians, and men who look like East Indians. Bustling among them, constantly, is a trim little brown man named Bhogwan Singh. Singh is a turban wrapper. On the payroll he is a technical adviser, but mostly he wraps turbans.

Turbans can be wrapped at least 50 different ways, each implying something about castle, tribe, wealth, or age. Americans would not mind, but England or India could not tolerate a Sikh in an "untouchable's" turban. Or vice versa. Hence Mr. Singh, who can wrap 100 turbans an hour.

He's an old-timer in Hollywood; came here 24 years ago and lectured on cobras in a beach sideshow until Universal hired him. He was the first Hindu in the movie colony. Now there are about 50.

Besides offering advice on pictures dealing with India, Mr. Singh also acts. And writes. He has been working 20 years on a story dealing with eastern mysteries and the transmigration of souls. He says it's very good.

If the Court Were to Show Contempt of Townsend

The Glamorous Adventure

by Jean Seivwright © 1936 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GAIL EVERETT, winner of a prize for costume design offered by a large silk manufacturing company, comes to New York to find work. She is hired—due to a stroke of luck—by MADAME LIZETTE, proprietor of an exclusive shop. Madame proves temperamental and difficult to work for.

DEREK HARGREAVES, young artist, is interested in Gail, and offers her friendly advice. Frequently Gail sees DICK SEARLES, whose sister, ROSEMARY, was her roommate at school.

Meanwhile, in Arizona, MARK CHAPMAN, long a wanderer, returns to find his old home in the hands of the Travers Mining Co. Mark suspects the deal is crooked. He does not know the whereabouts of his niece, Gail, rightful owner of the property.

REX HALL, Madame Lizette's son, is representing the Travers company.

Gail goes to spend the week-end at the Searles' home. Dick asks her to marry him and again she refuses.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

NATALIE PRESTON swung into step with Gail. "Hello," she said, "you look as though you'd won a fortune! Did you have a nice time over the week-end?"

It was late Monday afternoon and both girls were coming home from work.

"Gorgeous!" Gail told her.

"I want to hear all about it," Natalie urged as they entered the club house. "You certainly look pleased about something. Have you had any other excitement?"

"I should say I have!" Gail's voice was jubilant. "Madame Lizette couldn't come to the shop today, and I had to run things myself. Madame had an accident—not serious, though she cut her foot rather badly when she slipped and fell with some glasses in her hand. I don't think she'll be down for a day or two."

Gail smiled as she thought how well things had gone that day. Maybe it wasn't just right for her to feel that way, but she hoped Madame would remain at home for several days.

"Well, with that on top of your week-end I don't suppose you'd care to dine with me tonight and take in a movie?"

"Natalie! You know I'd love to go with you! It's sweet of you to ask me."

* * *

WHEN they met in the foyer later Natalie said, "I know a jolly little place just off Madison avenue where they serve delicious meals. The cooking is Swedish. Do you think you'd like that?"

"I'm sure I would,"

A short walk brought them to their destination, and once again Gail felt as though she had been transported to some other land. The waitresses were dressed in peasant costume, and the decorations were typically Scandinavian.

After they had consulted the menu and given the waiter their order their talk drifted to Gail's visit at the Searles' home.

"You went to school with young Searles' sister, didn't you?" Natalie asked.

"Yes. Rosemary was my roommate at school. Dick says she's coming home soon. I'm sure you'd like her. Maybe we can have lunch together some day."

"I'd love that. I suppose lots of wealthy girls go to Merrywood Hall."

"Yes. I wouldn't have been able to stay after Dad died if it hadn't been that Miss Cranston was an old friend of my mother's and she insisted on keeping me there."

"I'm sure no one would ever grudge doing anything for you. I know I wouldn't."

"That's sweet of you to say so," answered Gail, wondering if her estimate of Natalie had not been harsh.

"You must have felt dreadfully when you found you were penniless," Natalie went on. "Still I should have thought if your father had any paintings they would have brought a good deal."

"No, they didn't. At the time my father died, lots of galleries were closed. A friend of Miss Cranston's told her that pictures which would sell for hundreds of thousands of dollars in normal times were being given away by artists for just enough to pay for a meal."

"Really?"

"Yes. I know lots about art and artists." Gail smiled as she remembered her gay, improvident father. The sale of a picture was always an occasion for a celebration—perhaps a grand dinner with a theater party afterwards, or in the summer a long week-end at some seaside resort. Peter Everett gave little thought to the future!

* * *

THE waitress served them. Then, as she hastened away to attend to other customers, Natalie remarked, "I've been thinking a lot about you since we met. How strange it must seem for you to be all alone. I've such heaps of relatives. They make me tired. I wish some of them had never been born!"

"Natalie! What a dreadful thing to say! You don't know how I envy you. If I had even one living relative I'd be, oh, so happy!"

For an hour the girls dawdled over their food, comparing their likes and dislikes. As they rose, Natalie insisted on paying. Gail remonstrated, but the other girl paid the check.

As they approached the movie theater, Natalie suddenly exclaimed, "There's someone you should know—Rita Cordell. She's fashion editor of one of the newspapers." Hurrying after her, Natalie called, "Rita!"

"Oh, hello, Natalie!"

"I want you to meet the winner of the John S. Larne prize—Gail Everett. She's Madame Lizette's new designer."

"Oh, I'm delighted. It was only a few days ago that I asked Mr. Larne about the prize winner. He said he understood a society girl had won it and probably she wouldn't do anything further with her art."

"I'm a working girl," Gail answered. "I called at Mr. Larne's office but he was in the south, so I just went ahead and got this job."

"I'm due at Lizette's some day soon. Maybe she'll let me have one of your designs for my column. I'm ever so pleased to have met you. Be seeing you soon."

* * *

AS Rita Cordell hurried away Natalie said, "I'm awfully glad we met her. She can do heaps for you. And you know if you want to get ahead you've got to cash in on all the publicity you can get. Grab it every time. Take that from someone who knows."

"I guess you're right," Gail answered, remembering something Derek had said. Then, in a burst of confidence, she added, "I'm only a babe when it comes to the business end of things. You see, I've never had any business experience, though, of course, I didn't stress that too emphatically to Madame." She laughed.

It was almost midnight when they returned to the clubhouse, but as they passed the desk, glancing casually at the mail rack, Gail saw something in her box.

"Oh, you've got some letters," Natalie remarked as the girl at the desk handed Gail two.

"No," Gail answered, recognizing the clubhouse stationery. "They must be sending the bills out early this week."

When she reached her room she opened one of the envelopes and drew out a small slip on which was typed: "A telephone call was received for you at 8:15. Please call Schuyler 4927." The other contained a similar slip, but the time was 9 p. m.

"Derek's number!" Gail murmured. "What can he want?"

Tapers in the Dark

Such tender, simple things
Make life worthwhile—
Illusive thoughts we cannot quite express;
A laugh, a tear, the memory of a smile,
The touch of hands in sudden, soft caress;
At dawn a bird song rising sweet and high:
That breathless moment when the hushed trees wake;
That clear, soft colors of a morning sky
Repeated on the surface of a lake.
Those golden hours that slowly turn to gray
And with the setting sun are lost and gone;
The smell of rain-swept lilacs in the park;
A lover's kiss, a quarrel, then forgiving—
All these are tapers lighting up the dark
When days grow dull and sad with too much living.—Selected.

The June meeting of Circle No. 1, W. M. S. First Methodist church was held on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John P. Cox, South Elm street with Miss Anna Wagner as joint hostess. The meeting opened with the singing of "I Love to Tell the Story," Mrs. Minor Gordon accompanying at the piano. Dr. Fred R. Harrison gave a most helpful devotional stressing the importance of members being loyal to their leaders, each carrying his part of the responsibilities. Minutes were read and approved, reports from the various committees were given and dues were collected. Little Miss Marian Houser favored the circle with an humorous reading, entitled, "Entertaining Sister's Beau." Mrs. Frank Miles presented a program on "The Settlements and Disadvantaged Communities." Mrs. Ernest O'Neal gave a splendid article on "Our Home Missions," re-counting the progress of pioneer workers and those in the home field today. Results of the establishing of Ensley Settlement House, near Birmingham, Ala., was read by Mrs. Henry Hitt. Mrs. Miles gave interesting items from addresses given at the council meeting in Dallas. Open discussion of "Rural Churches" was instructive, and much interest was shown in the work done by some of the rural societies. Fifteen members and three visitors enjoyed the delightful refreshments—ice cream and cake.

A most interesting Arkansas Centennial program was given on Tuesday evening at the regular dinner meeting of the B. & P. W. club at Hotel Barlow, with Miss Jean Laseter as hostess. The table was beautifully appointed centered with a bowl of lovely David O. Dodd roses, and embossed cake outlined as the state of Arkansas. The programs were also in the shape of the state and tied with pink and green ribbons, sprayed with apple blossoms, the state flower. The interesting program included an address, "Arkansas and Business Women," by Miss Beryl Henry, "A Sketch of Arkansas History," by Miss Mary Arnold; "Do You Know That?" by the club; "Arkansas Poetry," Mrs. Frank Russell; vocal selection "Arkansas," Jordon, Miss Evelyn Murph. Miss Henry introduced as her guests for the evening, Miss Ella Posey of Little Rock, Miss Bullington, new home demonstration agent. Mrs. Frank Hicks introduced Miss Evelyn Johnson of Dallas, Texas, as her guest. Miss Evelyn Murph was the guest of Miss Jean Laseter.

A very beautiful event of the season was the surprise briday shower given by Miss Nowelle Rogers in her country home near here honoring Mrs. Franklin Adams, a recent bride. Mrs. Adams and Miss Rogers were school chums, they both having graduated from schoo lin 1935. Lovely pink and white roses brightened the rooms, and games and contests were played. The "brown" contest was won by Miss Mary Middlebrooks. After the games the bride was ushered to the dining room where she beheld a host of beautiful gifts. After the opening of the gifts an ice course with cake was served by Misses Norvelle Rogers, Glynn Black, Ilene Rogers, Vancille Black and Myrtle Rogers. Those tekpart in the affair were many friends of the bride.

Shoes Give Bright Touch

THE interest in Chinese art unquestionably inspired the color and design of these new dinner shoes. Of lacquer red, with figurines of birds and flowers in pale turquoise and gold, the shoes feature the new and popular wall last with Chinese toe. They are worn with a simple dinner dress of pale gray net, trimmed with a wide Chinese belt with carved buckle.

Dramatic Court Scenes in Film

"The Case Against Mrs. Ames" Comes to Saenger Thursday

George Brent, dynamic Irish hero of a score of hits, is co-starred with Madeleine Carroll, English screen favorite, in her first American-made picture, "The Case Against Mrs. Ames." Showing Thursday and Friday at the Saenger.

A story as close to life as yesterday's headlines, centered about a woman's fight to clear her name of murder and to keep the custody of her six-year-old child, is the basis of "The Case Against Mrs. Ames." Miss Carroll is cast in the title role.

Caught in a net of circumstantial evidence when her California millionaire and socialite husband is found murdered, Mrs. Ames is brought to trial. The mother-in-law who despises her retains an attorney for her defense. In a dramatic court scene, however, Mrs. Ames disregards the advice of her counsel and appeals directly to the jury.

HERE'S HOW THE FORD V-8 TRUCK IS Selling itself TO AMERICAN BUSINESS

1. WE LEND YOU a new truck for an "on-the-job" test. Truck picks up your own load.
2. YOUR OWN DRIVER takes the wheel—the Ford V-8 Truck goes out over your own regular routes, hauling your own load.
3. YOU CHECK THE RESULTS Test proves Ford V-8 performance, efficiency, economy.

Why not try it on your own job now?

PROVED IN '35, NOW BETTER THAN EVER, THE FORD V-8 TRUCK GIVES YOU:

80 H. P. V-8 ENGINE—downdraft carburction—exhaust valve seat inserts—improved crankcase ventilation.
IMPROVED COOLING—with larger, 19-in. fan—exhaust type hood louvers—and a radiator of flat tube and fin construction.
STRONGER FULL-FLOATING REAR AXLE—heavier shafts, new cone locks between shaft bolts and wheel hub.
EXTRA HEAVY DUTY FRAME—high carbon pressed steel, with full channel depth cross members.
NEEDLE ROLLER BEARINGS—for universal joints.
FULL TORQUE-TUBE DRIVE—with radius rods for positive axle and wheel alignments, longer tire wear and surer braking.
HEAVY-DUTY CLUTCH—centrifoce action increases capacity up to 400% at high engine speeds—pedal pressure reduced.
RIB-COOLED BRAKES—self-centering shoes, cast alloy non-scoring drums.
CORRECT LOAD DISTRIBUTION—more room in cab—more loading space ahead of rear axle.
GREATLY REDUCED MAINTENANCE—with low cost engine and parts exchange plan.

$500 AND UP, F. O. B. DETROIT—Easy terms through Universal Credit Company, under new 3½ per cent a month finance plans.

MOST Ford V-8 Trucks are being bought by, rather than sold to, truck operators who try before they buy. These owners haven't been asked to listen to sales arguments—they are choosing their Ford V-8 Trucks strictly on the basis of superiority proved by "on-the-job" tests.

Their experience confirms what owner records show—that the 80 horsepower Ford V-8 Truck engine offers the ideal balance of power, speed, flexibility and economy for modern hauling. That chassis, frame and bodies are designed to meet 90% of all hauling needs, and built to stay on the job!

Now, in the Ford V-8 Truck for 1936, you get the same V-8 performance and the same rugged dependability—plus new advancements that give even smoother operation and longer life. Study the features listed here and consider how much they mean to anyone who wants to cut trucking costs.

Ask your Ford Dealer to lend you a 1936 Ford V-8 Truck. Put your own driver at the wheel and put it on the toughest job you have. Then check results—and draw your own conclusions. There's no charge or obligation whatsoever.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

WORLD'S END

LATE in 1835, Charles Darwin arrived at a group of islands lying on the equator in the Pacific, where he found strange birds and animals that helped him formulate his revolutionary theory of evolution. Here, amid hundreds of craters and cold lava rock, he found the huge tortoises called "galapagos," from which the islands got their name.

Today, these Galapagos Islands are the "world's end" for scientists and adventurers. Arrivals find there a fascination which led the Spaniards, who discovered the group centuries ago, to call them "The Enchanted Isles." Today, hardly a tortoise exists there, but many of these strange old creatures may be found in zoos throughout the world. Owned by Ecuador, the islands originally harbored a penal colony.

Early in 1936, Ecuador issued a set of stamps for the islands. The stamp shown here pictures a "galapago."

Change in Crime Laws Are Asked

Petitions Placed in Circulation by Arkansas Bar Association

LITTLE ROCK — The committee named by Governor Futrell two years ago to study proposed reforms in criminal law Tuesday announced the text of a measure which it proposes to initiate for submission at the November election.

Initiative petitions have been placed in circulation by the Arkansas Bar Association.

The bill would make extensive changes in the criminal code and would encourage publication of news concerning criminal offenses by protecting reporters and publishers from having to disclose sources of their information.

The newspaper pricilege section provides that:

"Before any editor, reporter or other writer for any newspaper or periodical or publisher of any newspaper or periodical, shall be required to disclose to any grand jury, or to any other authority, the source of the information used as the basis for any article he may have written or published, it must be shown that such article was written and published in bad faith, with malice, and not in the interest of the public welfare."

Limit on Prosecutor's Fees

The petition calls for the repeal of the statute limiting jury service to once in two years and limits prosecuting attorneys' fees by providing that "no prosecuting attorney may receive more than two fees for conviction of one defendant under one indictment, presentment or information, regardless of the number of counts therein."

Another change provides that where a defendant in a trial pleads insanity or the judge has reason to believe the defendant was insane at the time of the crime, the judge shall order the person on trial committed to the State Hospital for observation. The observation period could nt exceed ne month and physicians at the institution would be required to furnish the court a written report.

Previous Bill Killed

A bill embodying practically the same changes died in a senate committee at the last legislative session, its sponsors charging it was "amended to death." They withdrew it from a vote, declaring the amendments had rendered it virtually ineffective.

A terror-inspiring band were these night riders, forerunners of the Black Legion, as they gathered at Buckeye Lake, O., during the heyday of the klan. Clad in black robes and hoods, bearing skull and crossbones in signia, they represented the militant branch of the organization. Dr. William Shepard of Bellaire, O., who admits that he was organizer of the riders in Southeastern Ohio, asserted with pride that the black-robed terrorists created a sensation when they mingled with white-sheeted klansmen at a Ku Klux encampment.

Typifying the intense feeling against the Black Legion as outrage charges piled up was the hanging of this dummy in Ravenna, O. Viewing it are left to right, L. H. Burns, E. F. Bisson, and S. A. Ciancio. Investigation of activities of the cult in northern Ohio is being pushed by prosecutors.

Symbol of terror, this is the membership card of the Black Legion, according to a former member who turned it over to Toledo authorities.

The flogging of Harley W. Smith (above), Norvall, Mich., WPA worker, by Black Legion terrorists caused the arrest of four men on kidnap and assault charges.

William Haines Is Beaten by Mob Ban

Ex-Movie Star Given Black Eyes and Chased Out of Town

LOS ANGELES — (AP) — William Haines, and a companion, Jimmy Shields, were severely beaten by a cursing mob which chased them and 10 men friends out of the Manhattan Beach Community Sunday night, Haines and sheriff's officers said Tuesday.

In Hollywood, Haines said he could not account for the attack. More than 100 persons, including several women, were in the mob, he said.

No arrests have been made.

Several men in the Manhattan Beach area boasted Tuesday of having taken part in the mobbing, saying they were members of a so-called white legion.

"Some wild rumor must have stirred them up," said Haines at his antique and interior decorating shop. "It was a lynch mob. It might have been some sort of Klan or secret organization."

Chased Out of Town

Haines, who has been out of pictures three years, said that about 40 men, some drunk, overtook him and Shields en route from a cafe to Haines' beach home and beat them. One mobster declared: "We've been waiting to get you," Haines reported.

"We're going to run you out of town," someone else shouted.

Both Haines' eyes were blacked and Shields was cut and bruised before the mob shoved them and three of tomobile and drove them out of the community.

Shouting and jeering, the mob went to a house near Haines' and routed out five men who said they were friends of his from Hollywood. The men left immediately.

Mob "Cleans Up" Community

The report said someone yelled: "Let's clean up the town," and members of the mob waylaid 11 other men reported to have been guests for a party to have been held at the Haines' place that night. These men were from two nearby houses which the mob invaded, warning everyone there to be out of town by midnight.

A riot call was sent to the sheriff's sub-station home six miles away, and deputies responded. By that time, however, the mob had dispersed.

Haines said he rented the beach house only two weeks ago. Shields lived at the house last week and he (Haines) went there Sunday.

Haines declared the mobbing took him by surprise and he did not know what he should have done about the situation.
